Wall Street Journal: Silver: 300% - 1000% in the next 3-10 Years.

“The shorter-term pattern suggests that we will be heading up back toward the 40-50 region within the next three to five years, and within the next 15 years, I am expecting silver to be able to increase by 10-15 times the price at which it will soon bottom. This means I would expect silver to exceed the $100 mark within the next decade or so.”

US MINT: “Since 2007, sales have increased nearly five-fold from 9,887,000 in 2007 to more than 44 million last year.”

The U.S. Mint announced that the sale of American Eagle silver bullion coins reached an all-time high for the third consecutive year.

“Once again, global demand for the American Eagle Silver Bullion Coins drove sales to a record high, this year reaching 47,000,000, surpassing the 44,006,000 ounces sold in 2014 and the 42,675,000 ounces sold in 2013,” the mint said in a press release Wednesday.

JP Morgan - “Silver one of most undervalued assets in world today”

In 2012, JP Morgan held 5 million ounces of PHYSICAL SILVER in their corporate account. 5 million. JP Morgan now holds 55 million ounces of physical silver. That's over a billion dollars of physical silver purchased in just 3 years. 10 times the amount they held 3 years ago!

The re-pricing of silver is an imminent, inevitable event, one that the One Bank is pushing us towards, at an accelerating rate

Silver More Coveted Than Gold

The re-pricing of silver is an imminent, inevitable event, one that the One Bank is pushing us towards, at an accelerating rate

It should be highly interesting to silver investors (in particular) and anyone interested in preserving their wealth (in general) that a $1,000/oz starting price for the price of silver – today – has been produced through two, totally separate avenues of analysis.

Why manipulate the price of silver to absurd ratios of 50:1 or 70:1, when the banksters themselves knew that a rational/appropriate price-ratio for the two metals (as of the mid-1980's) was 10:1? Simple. This relates directly back to what was said in Part I: it is silver which is the more-important of these two monetary metals (in the crimes of the One Bank). It was/is silver which these Criminals are obsessed with keeping out of the hands of the Average Person.

How best to accomplish this? (Attempt to) hoard that silver, and the silver still exists – and is subject to the risk that the banksters' own greed would cause them to disgorge that silver onto the market, at some point. But destroy all that silver, by having it “consumed” (i.e. strewn amongst the landfills of the world), and you keep the Peoples' Money out of the peoples' hands, forever.

It should be highly interesting to silver investors (in particular) and anyone interested in preserving their wealth (in general) that a $1,000/oz starting price for the price of silver – today – has been produced through two, totally separate avenues of analysis. Meanwhile, as just explained; the suicidal race-to-implosion by the banksters themselves in this market must be close to its ultimate, inevitable end, no matter what “secret stockpile” of silver they have amassed previously, or what crimes they commit in this market.

The re-pricing of silver is an imminent, inevitable event, one that the One Bank is pushing us towards, at an accelerating rate. The fact that such re-pricing must be a “radical” move higher in the current, phony price is simply a function of the extreme level of price-perversion in these markets - as evidenced by the difference between our legal price ratio between gold and silver, versus the (manipulated) market price ratio.

Wall Street Journal: “The end-game of this is most likely a continuation of the long-term decline and eventual collapse of the U.S. dollar as we currently use it, and that eventually you’ll likely trade some of your gold and silver coins for 10-100x the number of dollars (or whatever currency the U.S. and its citizens are using at that point) than you paid for them and use whatever currency regime(s) have replaced the status quo system.”

“Silver will surpass its non-inflation adjusted, nominal high of $50 per ounce in the coming years. Indeed, we believe that silver will surpass its inflation adjusted high or real record high of over $150 per ounce in the next 5 to 7 years.”
